The conference will address the need for think tanks in Italy to provide a forum for the free and open discussion between businesses, social groups, and universities to develop public policy to modernize Italy.

We intend to begin the discussion by examining the role that think tanks play in the United States. Such institutions, which find their origins in a wide range of intellectual perspectives, serve as places for the open critique of social, economic, and political problems and free debate over their reform. American think tanks have become important actors in the conduct of analysis the development of new public policies. They produce work product that goes beyond purely academic books and articles, with an eye toward practical solutions. They depend on charitable contributions like universities, but without a body of alumni who donate out of school loyalties.

This conference will create an open forum to discuss whether the American think tank can take root in Italy. Italy has a related, but different, political, economic, and social context that may call for a different model. But the purpose of the institution will remain the same: to produce high quality research and recommendations to solve difficult public policy challenges. The initiative will be attended by representatives of important US and Italian public policy institutions, together with leaders from academia, culture, consulting, law and business.
